LETTER OF COMMENT

Comments:

Enbridge Gas has created high profits in the last quarter, let alone fiscal year, while the rest of the national and international world suffer from high grocery prices, high gas prices, high inflation for a number of years, and high everything. While it has been the historical imperative of companies to push costs onto the consumer, rarely eating them and making their profits evermore record setting, it is wholly irresponsible to do so at a time where even the average person is struggling with the day to day. Entire generations are struggling to purchase a home, and adding in additional costs such as heating and energy are simply going to further exacerbate the issue. Things like natural gas and other necessities should be placed at a freeze for the moment, until the overall system eases on people, or at a minimum, Enbridge Gas is willing to offer ALL Employees, with the exception of C-Level and other high tier management, a raise equal to that of expected profit from this price hike, so that the actual workers see the benefit, not the corporate stakeholders.
