LETTER OF COMMENT

Comments:

In 2024, Enbridge gas reported earnings of $5.1 billion and will be increasing their shareholder dividends in 2025. At a time when many Canadians are struggling with the current economy and providing necessities to their families - such as rising grocery costs, increasing revenues for a company that is already making BILLIONS of dollars, does not seem reasonable. Many companies are facing hardships and have looked to internal cost control measures. Will Enbridge gas be taking the same approach, or is there only way to increase profits is to increase the cost to struggling consumers?
