Why must every rate continuously rise so quickly? This, and other utilities are quickly reach ridiculous levels of pricing. We're barely keeping our heads above the water as it is. And with only one electricity provider in London, we have no choice but to take it.

I know this rate is going to go through regardless of public input (that's almost always the way; money talks). Just know that myself and many in my circle are getting increasingly frustrated and angry at London Hydro and other utilities. It will reach a boiling point eventually.
