I would like to file a notice of objection to the proposed rate increase. Supposedly it is to pay for expansion. This expansion is not a vanity project that will never earn any money. Once it's completed, London Hydro will start getting it's money back by charging transmission fees. Therefore, it is not up to the current customers to fund these expansions. There is too much use of any old excuse to jack rates up. If London Hydro is so short of cash, maybe it should look at the salaries being paid. London Hydro is not a non profit company and, therefore, should be saving money out of current transmission charges to help cover expansion plans.
