Attention: Ms. Kirsten Walli, Board Secretary

Dear Ms. Walli:

Re: EB-2010-0243
Evidentiary Filings - Wahgoshig First Nation (intervener)

As per Procedural Order No. 1 issued by the Ontario Energy Board on September 21, 2010 please accept the attached documents as the evidentiary filings of Wahgoshig First Nation.

As noted in the correspondence from Detour Gold to the Ontario Energy Board dated October 5, 2010 the Response to Interrogatories filed by Detour Gold included a large volume of material. These materials inform both the matters at issue and the evidence required for filing. Hardcopies were not received by our office until October 6, 2010 in the afternoon and the time period for review and response was further limited by the statutory holiday on October 11, 2010. Due to the limited time period for review and consideration of the materials filed by Detour Gold it was not possible to complete the hard copy filings of these materials within the specified time line. Nonetheless, electronic copies have been provided to the Applicant, the Ontario Energy Board and all of the interveners on the date of this letter. Hardcopies have been sent by courier to the Applicant and the interveners and they will be filed with the Ontario Energy Board on October 13, 2010.

The following documents are attached:

- Correspondence from Kate Kempton, legal counsel to Wahgoshig First Nation to Detour Gold and the Ministers of the Ministry of Northern Development, Mines and Forestry, Ministry of Natural Resources and Ministry of the Environment dated September 16, 2010 requesting urgent action on the part of the Applicant and the Crown to consult and accommodate Wahgoshig First Nation (please note that this correspondence expresses concerns regarding the environmental assessment and all processes for approvals being sought by Detour Gold contrary to the response provided by Detour Gold to interrogatory questions 2(a)(ii) and (iii) submitted by Wahgoshig First Nation);

- Land claim submitted to Indian and Northern Affairs Canada (“INAC”) by Wahgoshig First Nation dated January 18, 1995;
- “Without Prejudice” correspondence from INAC to Wahgoshig First Nation dated August 6, 2010 informing Wahgoshig First Nation of the decision of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development not to accept the specific claim contesting the validity of the joint ownership of Abitibi IR 70;
- Specific Claims Tribunal Act (demonstrates that the refusal of INAC to accept a specific claim is a necessary precondition for pursuing the claim before the Specific Claims Tribunal – see section 16(1)(a));
- Excerpts from the Specific Claims Policy and Process Guide (demonstrates that third party land interests may prevent the selection of those lands by a First Nation for additions to reserve lands – see pages 8-9); and,
- Excerpts from the INAC Land Management Manual (demonstrates that third party land interests must be addressed prior to acquisition of lands – see paragraphs 6.13 to 6.16).

Further, as noted in our correspondence of September 28, 2010, we would respectfully request that the Ontario Energy Board provide (or ensure that Detour Gold provides us) with a full copy of all materials filed with the Ontario Energy Board prior to September 28, 2010. We do not have a record of the materials filed in advance of that date. We request both electronic and hard copies of the materials.

If there are any questions please do not hesitate to contact the undersigned.

Yours truly,

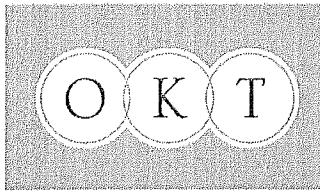

Kate Kempton

Dear Sirs/Mesdames:

Re: URGENT - Need to Consult and Accommodate Wahgoshig First Nation

We are legal counsel to Wahgoshig First Nation and are writing on its behalf with an urgent request that Detour and the Ministries put on hold all processes for approvals currently being pursued for the Detour gold mine project and its related facilities, until an adequate process for consultation and accommodation of WFN is set up and implemented.

This letter constitutes WFN's "comments" in respect of the EAs listed below. Whether additional substantive comments will be made by WFN later depends on good measure on the Crown's and Detour's response to this letter.

We have recently been informed that the following processes for approvals are being pursued:

- The MNR Class EA relating to Resource Stewardship and Facility Development Projects (dealing with many aspects of the mine project), the final Environmental Study Report for which was issued in August 2010, and for which the Crown states that comments are due by September 17;
- Provincial screening level EA for early-construction-phase diesel generated power at the mine site;
- Provincial individual EA for contingency of 10 MW of diesel power for later construction phase of mine project (in case the transmission line element of the project does not get approved in time), the draft Terms of Reference for which were just released and which Detour states it needs comments back by October 4, 2010;
- Provincial individual EA for 230 KV transmission line, which the MOE reviewed and issued its Review Report in mid-August and which the MOE states it needs comments back by September 17, 2010;
- Application before the OEB for its approval of the transmission line, of which we were informed late August.

In addition to the above, there will be federal EAs and likely other approval processes to come. There have also likely been other approvals issued to date.

Detour states in its Class EA ESR that "Project construction is scheduled to commence in the latter half of 2010..." This timeframe is unrealistic and unfair given that the duty to consult and accommodate WFN remains unfulfilled.

Despite the failure to meet the duty to consult and accommodate, there appears to be a significant push on to begin construction on a very fast pace, without providing enough time, resources, or an adequate process for WFN participation and input.

What WFN requires, and what the law requires, is that a process be set up with WFN through which consultation and accommodation of WFN will be satisfied. Given the size and complexity of this project and its many elements, and the potential for serious impacts on WFN's rights and the environment in its traditional territory, and given the large number of EAs and approval processes, many of which are colliding on the same timeframe, there should have been and must be now, a single, coordinated, comprehensive process established that provides adequate time and resources for WFN's informed participation.

Instead, what has happened to date has been a series of ad-hoc, fragmented interactions, without anything close to adequate resourcing and time for WFN’s informed involvement. This has caused a great deal of confusion and has overwhelmed the First Nation.

The establishment of an adequate process must occur now, before any further steps are taken in the above and other approval processes. Any so-called “deadlines” for comments must be considered suspended as they apply to WFN, until an adequate consultation and accommodation process is developed and underway.

Such a process should have been established a long time ago: courts have stated that the first step in consultation should be consulting with the First Nation about the appropriate process itself, and that consultation should begin at the earliest possible stage, or the strategic planning stage. It is only reasonable (and necessary) to insist that approval processes be halted while work is undertaken to create and resource this process now.

This process cannot simply just comprise public stakeholder processes for the above listed approvals and EAs. The Supreme Court of Canada has made it clear that public stakeholder processes will typically not, of themselves, satisfy the duty to consult and accommodate. They will certainly not satisfy the duty if the affected First Nation has not been included at a strategic planning level of participation (such as appointing panel members for EAs, being a member of high-level decision-making working groups, etc.), has not had sufficient time to respond at each stage, and has not received adequate resources to enable it to participate in an informed way. There is no way that the duty to consult and accommodate WFN will be met without the provision of adequate resources, especially for a project of this size.

The Class EA ESR of itself is a stack of documentation about 8 inches high, filled with highly technical information which cannot be understood or analysed without expertise. This documentation arrived at WFN at around the same time as several other technical and complex documents in regard to the other approval processes for Detour’s project. This would overwhelm even a highly scientifically-sophisticated and well-resourced party. WFN on the other hand is a small First Nation, without adequate resources (for external and internal expertise, legal advice and the like) or time to provide informed input. Courts are highly unlikely to consider this a reasonable and adequate consultation and accommodation process in these circumstances.

Therefore, on behalf of WFN, we request that Detour and each of the above Crown parties appoint representatives with authority to make key decisions in a consultation and accommodation process with WFN, and that such representatives be made available to meet with WFN, Gerry Kerr as the consultant retained by WFN for negotiations of accommodation, and myself from our firm. We propose to meet near the end of September or early October, and we suggest this timeframe to accommodate Detour’s desires to move this project ahead. At that meeting, we would propose WFN’s preferred process for engagement, which will include a workplan and a budget, the costs of which we would expect the Crown and Detour to cover. It is also likely to include proposals to have WFN’s involvement in high-level working groups, taskforces, or the like, that have oversight over the various approval processes.

All of the above is becoming standard and commonplace in consultations with First Nations in Ontario, especially for large projects such as this one that are likely to have significant impacts on the environment and on the rights, interests and traditional lands of aboriginal peoples. We do not intend to propose anything out of the ordinary or unreasonable.

If the Crown and Detour wish this process to include other affected First Nations, WFN is amenable to that. But since the duty to consult and accommodate is the Crown's (and in a sense Detour's, being the Crown's delegate for certain consultation and accommodation purposes), and not WFN's, it will be up to the Crown and Detour to seek to engage the other First Nations to this end. If this does not happen, then we suggest that Detour and the Crown proceed with WFN alone at this time.

My office will be in contact to try to set up a meeting in the next few weeks. In the meantime, should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me. If you prefer to have us work through your legal counsel, please provide us with their names and contact information.

Thank you in advance for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

jog

Re: Wahgoshig (Abitibi) First Nation Land Claim

Dear Mr. Westland:

On behalf of the Wahgoshig First Nation, I am pleased to submit a land claim to be dealt with under the Specific Claims Policy.

The claim concerns the use of Timber Funds for the Abitibi Bands for the purchase of a reserve in Quebec for the Abitibiwinnie Band. The Wahgoshig First Nation contests the inclusion of the Quebec Indian Band into Treaty Nine and the subsequent splitting of assets of the Abitibi Reserve allotted to the Abitibi Ontario Band in 1906. This split resulted in a division of assets between the two bands on a 80%-20% basis in favour of the Abitibiwinnie Band of Quebec; a split which is still in effect today and which continues to affect all potential development of the reserve. The Treaty Land Entitlement of the Abitibi-Ontario Band (now called Wahgoshig) under Treaty Nine was consequently never fulfilled.

The First Nation, together with NAN's support, seek a redress for the past breaches and a solution to the current impasse regarding the reserves assets.

Enclosed is a letter sent to Brad Morse, Specific Advisor to the Minister, regarding this claim. I look forward to hearing from your Research Branch concerning the facts of this case.

Sincerely yours,

Re: Wahgoshig (Abitibi) First Nation Land & Resources Issues

Dear Mr. Morse:

We are now submitting a land claim to the Specific Claims Branch to be reviewed by them and assessed for further action for the above-mentioned First Nation. I am writing to you because this claim has repercussions which affect the development of the reserve today. In the past, Abitibi-Wahgoshig First Nation has sought other avenues to resolve the matter, but all administrative solutions were turned down by the Department of Indian Affairs who have refused to discuss the problem leaving Abitibi-Wahgoshig in an impossible position and paralyzing any potential development on the reserve.

It is our belief that these problems arise from the fact that the government at the time of Treaty #9 in 1905/06 was unable to deal with a band that straddled the Quebec and Ontario borders.

The issue of the claim concerns the splitting of the assets of the original reserve Abitibi #70, in northeast Ontario allotted to the Abitibi Ontario Indians in 1906, under the provisions of Treaty #9. At that time (and still today), a group of Abitibi Indians was located in Quebec. The Treaty Commissioners (Treaty #9, 1905/06) although warned of the fact that there was a Quebec group, were unable to deal with the Quebec government and having made promises to the Quebec group, the Department in 1908 induced the Abitibi Ontario Band to accept the Abitibi Quebec Indians as members of the Band to share equally in all assets and with the same Treaty Rights as the original signatories to the Treaty. (This was done without the involvement of the Ontario government, who were also signatory to the treaty).

The initial effect of this was to change the land base and the treaty land entitlement was reduced. A second effect was the use of the reserve's timber resource in 1950 to purchase a reserve for the Abitibiwinnie (Quebec) Indians in Quebec. Since that time, the reserve assets and all resources have been split on a 80%-20% basis in favour of Abitibiwinnie. This has frustrated all development on the reserve.

We are concerned that this matter be settled quickly. Although the Wahgoshig First Nation is seeking redress for past grievances, loss of resources and revenues, the current situation must be addressed with a greater speed than has been demonstrated by the Specific Claims Branch. As we are moving into self-government negotiations, it is important that Wahgoshig First Nation have a reliable land base as promised them under Treaty #9.

Wahgoshig First Nation is willing to look into an administrative solution to resolve the immediate problem, without prejudice, to their land claim.

Sincerely yours,

Brian Davey

Barbier & Solleter

SYNOPSIS OF ALLEGATIONS AGAINST THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT IN THE WAHGOSHIG (ABITIBI) CLAIM

First, when the Abitibi representatives accepted the terms of Treaty No.9 in 1906, they asked for as much frontage on Lake Abitibi as possible. Instead, the allocated reserve has a relatively narrow lake frontage and a long extension into the interior. The lake frontage was further curtailed when the government excluded from the reserve some land staked by a mineral prospector. By these actions the federal government breached its fiduciary duty to the Abitibi Band and its obligations under Treaty No.9.

Second, and more significantly, the federal seriously undermined the position of the Abitibi Band by a dubious and illegal transaction in 1908. Going back to 1905-06, the federal and provincial commissioners were faced with two groups of Abitibi Indian people, an Ontario group and a Quebec group. The reserve set aside in 1906 was sufficient for the Ontario numbers based on the Treaty No.9 land entitlement formula (one square mile per family of five). The Quebec group was told that the commissioners did not have the legal authority to deal with them in the context of Treaty No.9. However, the federal commissioner undertook that the federal government would be dealing with the Province of Quebec and that a reserve would be found for them in Quebec. The Quebec group was in fact encouraged to start looking for sites.

After 1906 the federal government made desultory efforts to negotiate with the Province of Quebec in order to obtain a reserve in Quebec for the Quebec Abitibi group. At one point the Province did offer land for a reserve, but this offer was not acceptable to the federal government. It is alleged that the federal government failed to make reasonable efforts to find a Quebec solution for the Quebec Band. The federal government may have been deterred by the prospect of spending money to obtain a reserve in Quebec.

In order to deal with the entreaties of the Quebec group at no expense, the federal government came upon the idea of granting to the Quebec group rights in the Ontario reserve of the Abitibi band. Between 1906 and 1908, the Ontario group had been decimated by deadly disease. In this weakened condition (known to the federal government), a handful of Abitibi Band members purportedly agreed to a transaction whereby the Quebec Indian people would be merged into the Ontario band, obtaining thereby an undivided interest in the Ontario reserve. Thus, the federal government was able to deal with the Quebec "problem" at no cost to itself. However, in the long run, the solution was purely artificial as the Quebec Indian people had no intention of living on the Ontario reserve, or anywhere else in Ontario for that matter.

It is alleged that the 1908 transaction was a violation of the federal government's fiduciary duty. The value of the reserve "asset" was seriously diluted. The federal government (the fiduciary) was motivated by self-interest; it had to extricate itself from the Quebec situation. The transaction was not motivated by any desire to improve the situation of the Ontario

Band. The Ontario Band members were not given sufficient information on the nature of the transaction and its long term negative effects.

In addition, it is alleged that the 1908 transaction was illegal and void. First, the 1908 transaction violated the terms of Treaty No.9. If it was not possible to join the two groups in an Ontario reserve in 1906, it was not possible to do it in 1908 either. To make the 1908 transaction somehow valid under the Treaty, Canada would have had to consult with Ontario; this was not done. Second, the 1908 transaction was not authorized by any provision of the Indian Act of the day. It is noteworthy that the order-in-council purporting to authorize the merger did not refer to any sanctioning section of the Act. While the federal government did have authority to authorize individual membership transfers, the 1908 Abitibi transaction was wholly different. Essentially, the Ontario Indian people were duped into surrendering a very significant interest in their reserve land without compensation and without authority under the Indian Act.

The reserve asset lay relatively dormant until the late 1940's. Throughout this interim period it is clear from the record that the Indian agents were primarily located in Quebec and heavily favoured the Quebec group of Indians. At times, the assumption seemed to be that the Quebec group owned the Ontario reserve in its entirety. There was a timber surrender which led to a significant flow of funds into the revenue account connected with the Ontario reserve. At this strategic point, a division of the Ontario and Quebec groups into separate bands was engineered in 1951. This transaction was highly prejudicial to the Ontario band. It allowed the Quebec band a continuing per capita interest in the Ontario reserve and its accounts. At the same time, the Ontario band was purportedly excluded from any interest in the separate assets of the Quebec band.

With the assistance of federal officials, the Quebec group used its per capita share of the timber money drawn from the Ontario reserve to purchase a new reserve in Quebec. Because of the structure of the 1951 transaction, the Ontario band was on the face of it excluded from any interest in the new Quebec reserve. This was an outrageous result as the Quebec land was purchased with money earned from the timber taken from the Ontario reserve.

It is alleged that the 1951 transaction was a further breach of the federal government's fiduciary duty owed to the Ontario Abitibi Band. The transaction continued the pattern whereby the reserve asset of the Ontario band was essentially plundered for the benefit of the Quebec band. As well, the federal government benefited substantially. The federal government was finally able to take care of the Quebec group's demand for a Quebec reserve, but at no expense to the federal government. The federal government was able to arrange a situation whereby the Ontario Indian people bought the Quebec reserve for the Quebec people.

In addition, it is alleged that the 1951 ^{ARRANGEMENT} was illegal and void. This is so because the 1951 transaction was based on the 1908 "merger". If, as alleged, the 1908 purported merger was illegal, it is clear that the 1951 arrangement had no foundation.

The 1951 arrangement was essentially part of a chain that was illegal and void from the very beginning. Since the 1908-1951 chain is illegal and void, it is alleged that the Ontario band in fact owns the Quebec reserve land purchased with money obtained from the Ontario timber assets.

The arrangement in favour of the Quebec band was refined somewhat in 1974. Instead of a flexible per capita arrangement, the Quebec group purportedly obtained a permanent 80% interest in the Ontario reserve. It is alleged that this arrangement is void and illegal since it depends on the chain going back to 1908.

By its illegal acts starting in 1908, the federal government has created a situation which is extremely prejudicial to the Ontario band that signed the Treaty in 1906. Instead of owning a full-size reserve as per the terms of Treaty No.9, it is left with a 20% interest. The lion's share is owned by a group that does not even live in the Province. This arrangement has led to a significant loss of timber and other revenues at least since 1951. It has created a situation today where the members of Wahgoshig (Abitibi) are reluctant to undertake community economic development projects on reserve. The difficulty is that if the projects are successful, 80% of the profits will disappear. In short, the current situation is intolerable and profoundly detrimental to the Ontario band. The liability of the federal government is substantial and continuing.

MATHESON ON P0K 1N0

Dear Chlef Babln:

I wish to inform you that, based on the analysis of evidence documented by the Wahgoshig First Nation and by the Specific Claims Branch, and pursuant to The Specific Claims Policy and Process Guide, it is the decision of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development not to accept the Contesting the Validity of the Joint Ownership of Abitibi IR 70 specific claim for negotiation on the basis that there is no outstanding lawful obligation on the part of the Government of Canada.

In the Contesting the Validity of the Joint Ownership of Abitibi IR 70 specific claim, it is alleged that the Government of Canada breached its legal and fiduciary obligations as set out below.

1. When the Ontario and Quebec Abitibi bands were amalgamated in 1908, the numerical size of the new band increased appreciably but no corresponding amount of land was added to IR 70, which they now shared, to provide for this increase. As a result, the amalgamated band received less than one square mile per family of five, which was the standard formula applied when the Treaty was signed in 1905-1906 and which was applied in other treaties of that period. The amalgamation had the effect of actually reducing the amount of land the Ontario Abitibi band had been allotted under the Treaty.
2. The federal government was unable to move the Government of Quebec to provide reserve lands for any of the indigenous groups that made up the Algonquin Nation in Quebec, including the Quebec Abitibi band, and others. As a consequence, these groups were required to live as squatters for many years until private land was purchased for them from band funds. The federal government, therefore, failed to carry out its responsibilities for the protection and well being (medical, housing and education services) of these groups during that period.

Canada

3. There is no evidence to show that Interests of the Ontario Abitibi band were protected by the Agreement entered into in 1908 between the two bands or that the Ontario Abitibi band members were made fully aware by the federal government of the future implications of agreeing to share the assets and revenues of IR 70 with the larger Quebec Abitibi band. Later developments demonstrate that, in fact, the federal government did not protect the rights and interests of the Ontario Abitibi band guaranteed to them under Treaty 9.
4. The Ontario Abitibi band that signed the Treaty in 1906 and for whom IR 70 was originally set aside experienced a much reduced role in the management of the reserve after amalgamation as a result of the application of the per capita formula for the sharing of reserve assets. By 1947, the Ontario Abitibi band was outnumbered by the Quebec Abitibi band and, therefore, benefited less than they otherwise would have. Most of the correspondence during the years 1942-1956 concerning the disposition of the timber revenues of IR 70 reveals a bias on the part of the Government in favour of the Quebec Abitibi band's interests in acquiring land.
5. The Department of Indian Affairs failed to provide a solution to the problem that offered reasonable options to the two bands. The Department took the easy way out by promoting a solution that would allow the Quebec Abitibi band to receive annuity payments, to obtain reserve land, to share in the proceeds from the sale of reserve assets, but which at the same time, reduced the Treaty land entitlement of the Ontario Abitibi band (and the Quebec Abitibi band) in that the standard formula of one square mile per family of five was not applied.
6. In failing to secure for the Ontario Abitibi band as much reserve frontage on Lake Abitibi as possible, which had been their request at the outset of the Treaty negotiations, the federal government failed in its fiduciary duty to the band.
7. The federal government did not make reasonable efforts to find a Quebec solution for the Quebec Abitibi band and the solution it finally settled upon was motivated by self interest – the desire to extricate itself from the impasse with the Government of Quebec and to save money.
8. The 1908 amalgamation was a violation of the federal government's fiduciary duty in that it seriously undermined the position of the Ontario Abitibi band.
9. The 1908 amalgamation Agreement was illegal and void in that it violated the terms of Treaty 9.
10. Since the 1908 and 1951 chain is illegal, the Ontario Abitibi Band (Wahgoshig First Nation), in fact, owns the Quebec reserve, Pikogan IR 1, land purchased with money obtained from the Ontario timber assets.

11. The permanent 80% interest in IR 70, which the Quebec Abitibi band obtained in 1974, is void and illegal since it depends on the chain going back to 1908.

It is the Government of Canada's position that there is no outstanding lawful obligation on the part of the Government of Canada for the reasons stated below.

1. The evidence shows that the Ontario Abitibi band agreed to the 1908 amalgamation Agreement with the Quebec Abitibi band and did not indicate at the time that a bigger reserve would be necessary as a result of the amalgamation. The 1908 Agreement, which should not be confused with the 1906 Treaty, established the Ontario Abitibi band's willingness to amalgamate. The Ontario Abitibi band had the chance to discuss the size of the reserve, to ask for more land, or to refuse the amalgamation.
2. The evidence does not demonstrate that the Crown was obligated to protect the Indians and ensure their well being while waiting for a reserve. The Crown tried to create a reserve on public lands in Quebec, but the provincial government repeatedly refused all requests for reserve lands in the province.
3. There is no evidence to support the allegation that the Department of Indian Affairs did not protect the rights and interests of the Ontario Abitibi band under Treaty 9. There is also no evidence that the Commissioners were dishonest, distorted the truth, or forced the Ontario Abitibi band to share IR 70. The Crown is not required to forecast economic consequences resulting from sharing lands, assets, and revenues.
4. Whether or not evidence demonstrated the alleged bias, it would not invalidate the sharing of reserve assets, which was concluded in accordance with the Indian Act. The sharing of funds between the two bands was reasonable given the consent of both bands as evidenced in Band Council Resolutions.
5. In February 1907, the federal government fulfilled its obligation to the Ontario Abitibi Indians by creating a reserve. On June 22, 1908, the Ontario Abitibi and Quebec Abitibi bands unanimously ratified an amalgamation agreement following a meeting where they had the chance to ask questions and receive explanations. The amalgamation option seemed reasonable to both bands. The Agreement suggested by the Department of Indian Affairs did not violate Treaty 9.
6. When creating reserves, the Crown took into account the Indians' request regarding where the reserve should be situated. However, there was no obligation on the Crown to establish a reserve exactly as requested, including Lake Abitibi frontage. The land was Provincial Crown land, and the province had to approve the location of reserves created on those lands. Also, the evidence does not demonstrate that the lands, as described in the schedule, were not the lands agreed upon.

7. The Crown tried to create a reserve in the Province of Quebec in an effort to find a solution for the Quebec Abitibi band. These efforts demonstrate honourable conduct on the part of the federal government. The 1908 Agreement was viewed as a compromise to settle the impasse with the Government of Quebec, which refused to grant lands requested by the Indians as a reserve. At that time, the 1908 Agreement was the only viable solution. The solution was not unreasonable, not motivated by federal self interest, nor intended for the purpose of extricating the federal government from an impasse with the provincial government. The Crown was acting in both bands' interests.
8. The Ontario Abitibi and Quebec Abitibi bands were hunting on contiguous territories. Based on historical evidence, the two groups knew each other well. In fact, the 1908 Agreement recognized their willingness to be treated as one band. The historical documents do not reveal any practice to hide information or to force the bands to ratify the 1908 Agreement. Nothing indicates that the Ontario Abitibi band did not give informed consent when they accepted the Quebec Abitibi band into its band.
9. The Crown's obligations created at the signing of the Treaty in 1906 were fulfilled. The 1908 Agreement is subsequent to Treaty 9 and the treaty obligations should not be confused with the obligations created in the 1908 Agreement. The 1908 Agreement is a valid and binding contract upon the Ontario Abitibi and Quebec Abitibi bands.
10. The 1908 Agreement is a viable and binding contract upon the Ontario Abitibi and Quebec Abitibi bands. The new bands established in 1951 were created in conformity with the legal requirements at that time. Therefore, the 1908 and 1951 bands are valid. The money used to purchase lands for Pikogan IR 1 belonged exclusively to the Quebec Abitibi band. Therefore, Pikogan IR 1 is set aside exclusively for the benefit of the Quebec Abitibi band (Abitibiwinni First Nation).
11. Pursuant to the bands' desires, the funds were always shared in proportion to the bands' respective populations. The funds were reasonably shared, taking into account the fact that both bands jointly benefited from the reserve, despite the division in 1951.

35. If the Tribunal decides that a specific claim is invalid or awards compensation for a specific claim,

(a) each respondent is released from any cause of action, claim or liability to the claimant and any of its members of any kind, direct or indirect, arising out of the same or substantially the same facts on which the claim is based; and

(b) the claimant shall indemnify each respondent against any amount that the respondent becomes liable to pay as a result of a claim, action or other proceeding for damages brought by the claimant or any of its members against any other person arising out of the same or substantially the same facts.

Payment of award

36. (1) An award of compensation against the Crown may, at the discretion of the Crown, be paid by instalments, but the award must be fully paid within five years after the day on which the Tribunal makes its decision.

Interest

(2) The unpaid balance of the award bears simple interest from the date of the award, at a rate equal to the Bank of Canada's overnight rate on that day plus 2.5%, which shall be paid together with each instalment.

Abandoned
specific claim

37. A specific claim is discontinued if the claimant

33. Le Tribunal motive par écrit ses décisions. Il fait publier les décisions et les motifs de la manière qu'il estime indiquée.

Motifs écrits et publication

34. (1) Les décisions du Tribunal sont susceptibles de révision judiciaire au titre de l'article 28 de la Loi sur les Cours fédérales.

Révision
judiciaire

(2) Sous réserve du paragraphe (1), les décisions du Tribunal ne sont pas susceptibles de révision, sont définitives et ont l'autorité de la chose jugée entre les parties dans tout recours pris devant une autre juridiction et découlant essentiellement des mêmes faits.

Chose jugée

35. Lorsque le Tribunal rend une décision établissant qu'une revendication particulière est mal fondée ou accordant une indemnité pour une revendication particulière :

a) chaque partie intimée est libérée de toute responsabilité, à l'égard de la première nation revendicatrice et de chacun de ses membres, découlant essentiellement des mêmes faits que ceux sur lesquels la revendication est fondée;

b) le revendicateur est tenu de garantir chaque partie intimée contre toute somme qu'elle est tenue de payer par suite d'un recours pris dans le cadre d'une action intentée par la première nation revendicatrice ou l'un de ses membres contre un tiers et fondée essentiellement sur les mêmes faits que la revendication particulière.

Paiement de
l'indemnité

Intérêts

(2) La portion impayée de l'indemnité porte intérêt simple, à partir de la date où la décision a été rendue, au taux de financement à un jour de la Banque du Canada à cette date, majoré de 2,5 %, tel intérêt devant être payé en même temps que chaque versement.

37. La revendication particulière ne peut être maintenue dans l'un ou l'autre des cas suivants :

Revendications existantes

a) la première nation est réputée avoir déposé la revendication conformément à l'article 16 à la date d'entrée en vigueur de la présente loi;

b) si le règlement de tout ou partie de la revendication est en cours de négociation à cette date, le ministre est réputé avoir avisé la première nation de son acceptation de négocier le règlement au titre de cet article à la même date.

Examination by Minister

(2) Within six months after the day on which this Act comes into force, the Minister shall examine all claims — except those that the Minister has notified the First Nation in writing of the Minister's decision not to negotiate, in whole or in part — that are based on any one or more of the grounds referred to in subsection 14(1) submitted by First Nations to the Minister before the day on which this Act comes into force, and

(a) if a claim contains the kind of information that would meet the minimum standard established under subsection 16(2), the Minister shall notify the First Nation in writing that its claim is deemed to have been filed with the Minister in accordance with section 16 on the day on which this Act comes into force;

(b) if a claim does not contain that kind of information, the Minister shall request in writing that the First Nation provide the Minister with the missing information; or

(c) if a claim is being negotiated, in whole or in part, the Minister shall notify the First Nation in writing that for the purpose of section 16 the date of the Minister's decision to negotiate the claim is deemed to be the day on which this Act comes into force.

(3) If a First Nation provides the Minister with the information requested under paragraph (2)(b)

(a) within six months after the date of the Minister's request, its claim is deemed to have been filed with the Minister in accordance with section 16 on the day on which this Act comes into force; or

(b) later than six months after the date of the Minister's request, its claim will be filed with the Minister in accordance with section 16 on the date the requested information is received by the Minister.

Notice of filing date

(4) On receiving the information referred to in paragraph (2)(b), the Minister shall notify the First Nation in writing of the date on which its claim was filed with the Minister.

Examen des revendications par le ministre

(2) Dans les six mois suivant la date d'entrée en vigueur de la présente loi, le ministre examine chacune des revendications fondées sur l'un ou l'autre des faits mentionnés au paragraphe 14(1) qui lui ont été présentées par une première nation avant cette date, à l'exception de celles dont il a avisé par écrit la première nation de son refus d'en négocier le règlement, en tout ou en partie, et prend l'une des mesures suivantes :

a) si la première nation lui a communiqué le type de renseignements requis par la norme établie en application du paragraphe 16(2), il l'informe par écrit qu'elle est réputée avoir déposé la revendication conformément à l'article 16 à la date d'entrée en vigueur de la présente loi;

b) si elle ne lui a pas communiqué ce type de renseignements, il lui demande par écrit de lui communiquer les renseignements manquants;

c) si le règlement de tout ou partie de la revendication est en cours de négociation à cette date, il l'informe par écrit que, pour l'application de l'article 16, il est réputé l'avoir avisée de son acceptation de négocier ce règlement à la même date.

Date de dépôt

(3) La première nation est réputée avoir déposé conformément à l'article 16 la revendication à l'égard de laquelle elle a communiqué les renseignements visés à l'alinéa (2)b) :

a) soit à la date d'entrée en vigueur de la présente loi, dans le cas où le ministre reçoit les renseignements dans les six mois suivant la demande de communication;

b) soit à la date de réception de ceux-ci par le ministre, dans le cas où celle-ci est postérieure de plus de six mois à la demande de communication.

Avis de la date du dépôt

(4) Sur réception des renseignements visés à l'alinéa (2)b), le ministre avise par écrit la première nation de la date du dépôt.

Previous decision not to negotiate

43. For greater certainty, if, before the coming into force of this Act, a First Nation has been notified by the Minister of his or her decision not to negotiate a claim, the First Nation may not file that claim with the Tribunal on the basis of that decision but nothing prevents the First Nation from filing the claim with the Minister after the coming into force of this Act.

4. Compensation shall not include any additional amount based on "special value to the owner" unless it can be established that the land in question had a special economic value to the claimant band, over and above its market value.
5. Compensation shall not include any additional amount for the forcible taking of land.
6. Where compensation received is to be used by the First Nation for the purchase of other lands, such compensation may include reasonable acquisition costs, but these costs must not exceed 10% of the appraised value of the lands to be acquired.
7. Where it can be justified, a reasonable portion of the costs of negotiation may be added to the compensation paid.
8. In any settlement of specific native claims the government will take third party interests into account. As a general rule, the government will not accept any settlement which will lead to third parties being dispossessed.
9. Any compensation paid in respect to a claim shall take into account any previous expenditures already paid to the claimant in respect to the same claim.
10. The criteria above are general in nature and the actual amount which the claimant is offered will depend on the extent to which the claimant has established a valid claim, the burden of which rests with the claimant. As an example, where there is doubt that the lands were ever reserve land, the degree of doubt will be reflected in the compensation offered.

In respect to criterion 2, established practice will continue. Compensation will be equal to the market value of the reserve land at the time that it was taken brought forward to the present value. Similarly, in respect to damage, compensation will be equal to the historical value of the damage done brought forward to the present value.

Certainty and Finality

The federal government requires certainty and finality when it settles a claim. A claim settlement must achieve complete and final redress of the claim. First Nations must, therefore, provide the federal government with a release and an indemnity with respect to the claim, and may be required to provide a surrender, end litigation or take other steps so that the claim cannot be re-opened at some time in the future.

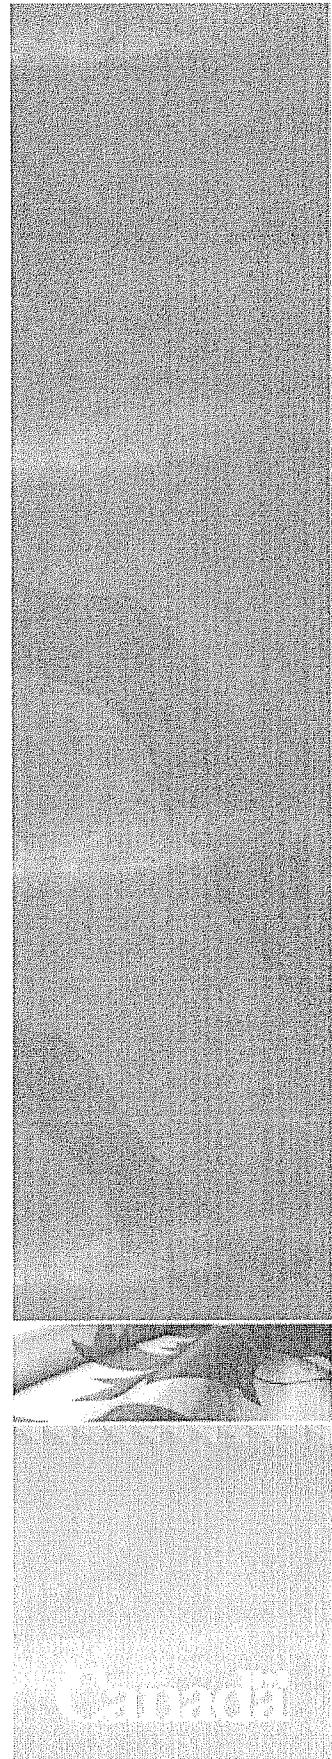

In any settlement of specific claims the federal government will take third party interests into account. The federal government will not accept any settlement which will lead to third parties being dispossessed. A claimant may use settlement money to purchase lands. Any land purchased by a claimant would be on a willing-seller/willing-buyer basis.

First Nations achieving a settlement of their claims are expected to manage the proceeds of the settlement themselves. In the case of substantial settlements, the final agreement may specify the structure of mechanisms established by the First Nation to administer settlement benefits.

A.	Site Specific Criteria: Legal Obligation	21
B.	Site Specific Criteria: Community Additions	31
C.	Site Specific Criteria: New Reserves / Other Policy	43
D.	The ATR Process	61

- 6.13 Good Title Transfer and Third Party Interests in Land Appropriate surveys, proper land descriptions and title searches must be done for every ATR proposal.
- 6.14 Additionally, lessees, subsurface right holders and other third parties may have legal interests in the land proposed for ATR or have a legal right of access to the land or a legal right to use the land, e.g., through leases, licences, permits, easements, rights of way, etc.
- 6.15 The change in title and jurisdiction involved in granting reserve status to land is a complicating factor affecting third party interests which does not occur in otherwise similar municipal boundary expansions. Once the land becomes a reserve, these interests will be subject to federal jurisdiction and the statutory regime of the Indian Act. This often involves negotiating an agreement to purchase the interests outright or to ensure that the interests remain in force and effect on the land once it is granted reserve status.
- 6.16 These third party interests must therefore be dealt with prior to the acquisition of land by INAC or the granting of reserve status. In regions where claims implementation legislation applies, it may be possible for First Nations to conduct a referendum/designation vote addressing third party interests on land being proposed under a claim before the land is granted reserve status. Otherwise, the First Nation can only designate the land after the land becomes reserve.
- 6.17 Financial Implications and Funding Sources An ATR reserve proposal may potentially impact on INAC and other federal government programming. Additions to reserves and new reserves must be affordable and the funding sources for any anticipated costs must be identified before an AIP can be given.
- 6.18 INAC funding impacts may include increased requirements for investments in capital and maintenance funding to service the new or expanded reserve land base. (e.g., both core and non-core funding for construction of roads and road maintenance, new schools, extension of subdivisions, sewer and water, etc.), as well as ongoing program funding (to support social programs, health services, education, etc.), to serve any potential increase in the on-reserve population.

Annex A

Site-Specific Criteria for Legal Obligations Proposals (Treaty Land Entitlement, Specific Claims and Legal Reversions)

1. General

- 1.1 These criteria apply to proposals that seek reserve status under specific claim settlement agreements (Treaty Land Entitlement, Specific Claims), as well as to legal reversions of former reserve land (where the original expropriation/transfer included a specific reversion clause returning the land to Canada when the land is no longer required for the original purposes, e.g., railways, roads, etc.).
- 1.2 In order to implement a court order, INAC regions must consult with the Department of Justice.
- 1.3 Where site-specific criteria are covered by claim settlement agreements, the provisions in such agreements take precedence over any of the site-specific criteria in this annex.
- 1.4 Where settlement agreements are silent on land selection, the ATR policy is that proposal must involve additions to reserve (as opposed to new reserves).
- 1.5 Where settlement agreements are silent on funding entitlement, the ATR policy is that there is no such entitlement.
- 1.6 In cases of legal reversions, proposals can result in additions to reserves or new reserves. It should be noted that reversions resulting from the restrictions in the Railway Act will not fall under the "Legal Obligations/Legal Reversions" policy of this directive unless there was also an express reversionary provision in the order authorizing the taking for railway purposes. Where there is no such reversionary clause, such proposals may be considered under either the "Community Additions" or "New Reserves/Policy" category (depending on whether they result in additions to reserves or new reserves).
- 1.7 Regions, and, where applicable, specific claim negotiators, should ensure that any communications planning with the First Nation is addressed well in advance of land selections by the First Nation.

5. Other Federal Government Departments/Agencies

- 5.1 The cost implications of ATR proposals for other federal government departments and agencies should also be provided for in the claim settlement agreement. Since these pressures cannot be used to frustrate a legal commitment to reserve creation, First Nations should be informing other federal departments and agencies of potential operational pressures in advance of potential reserve creation, i.e., preferably, before claim settlement agreements are concluded. Notice of proposed individual additions however should be given, as a courtesy, to other affected federal government departments or agencies, e.g., Health Canada, the RCMP, etc. Three months should be allowed for a response.

6. Existing Encumbrances

- 6.1 Land to be acquired under an ATR proposal may be subject to either existing legal interests in the land or existing rights to use the land. Examples of such encumbrances are leases, licences, permits, easements, rights of way, etc. The claim settlement agreement should provide how these interests will be treated.
- 6.2 In order to determine what, if any, encumbrances there are, INAC should ask the Department of Justice to arrange for a title search to be done against the land which is the subject of a proposal.
- 6.3 These encumbrances, which are legal interests in or rights to use the land, are distinct from the non-legal issues or concerns that a municipality or other third party may raise and should not be confused with such issues.
- 6.4 Where such encumbrances are not addressed in the settlement agreement, they should be minimized to the extent possible by the time the land is granted reserve status. This will allow the First Nation to enjoy the intended benefits from its proposed land use. If necessary, a limited degree of encumbrance is acceptable, as long as it does not affect the First Nation's proposed land use and does not conflict with the Indian Act, e.g. short-term licences granted under the Federal Real Property and Federal Immovables Act (FRPFIA) or provincial grants of subsurface mineral rights.

- 6.5 Existing encumbrances must be specifically identified and mechanisms for dealing with them must be determined in conjunction with the Department of Justice prior to the proposed acquisition by INAC. Encumbrances include both registered and unregistered interests/uses (where such unregistered interests are known).
- 6.6 Unless otherwise provided for in the claim settlement agreement, consistent with the objective of speeding up the ATR process, consideration should be given to taking title to the land subject to the existing interests/uses, as opposed to negotiating the revocation of such interests/uses and their conversion into an interest/use under the Indian Act. On this last point, if a third-party is concerned over the legality and/or certainty of its interest or right to use the land, another technical option is to create the interest/use under FRPFIA, set the land aside subject to the FRPFIA interest/use and then convert the interest/use into an Indian Act transaction once the land has reserve status.

7. Access

- 7.1 Where third party land would be "landlocked" by the addition to reserve or new reserve, legal access over the proposed reserve is to be negotiated, as a legal conveyancing requirement, by the First Nation before agreement in principle is granted. The need for access to utilities should also be negotiated with respect to the proposed reserve land. Upon First Nation request, INAC may lend technical assistance in support of the First Nation's negotiating lead.

8. Contiguity of Multiple Parcels

- 8.1 Where more than one parcel is proposed to be set aside as reserve, parcels should be contiguous/adjacent to one another.

9. Parcel Boundaries

- 9.1 Where relevant, the boundaries of additions/new reserves should follow natural water boundaries.
- 9.2 Parcel boundaries shall be described in accordance with the February 6, 1998 INAC/NRCan agreement on legal descriptions.
