ONTARIO ENERGY BOARD NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS OF VERIDIAN CONNECTIONS INC.

VERIDIAN CONNECTIONS INC. HAS APPLIED TO CHANGE ITS ELECTRICITY DISTRIBUTION RATES. LEARN MORE. HAVE YOUR SAY.

Veridian has applied to the Ontario Energy Board to change the amount it charges a typical residential customer each month beginning on May 1, 2014. A Veridian-Main customer would see an increase of $1.30 and a Veridian-Gravenhurst customer would see a decrease of $0.70. Other customers, including businesses, may be affected as well.

THE ONTARIO ENERGY BOARD IS HOLDING A PUBLIC HEARING

The Ontario Energy Board (OEB) will hold a public hearing to consider Veridian's request. We will question the company on its case for a rate increase. We will also hear arguments from individuals and from groups that represent Veridian's customers. At the end of this hearing, the OEB will decide what, if any, changes will be allowed.

Distributors typically apply for a full review of their rates every five years. Any rate changes for the years in between are automatically tied to inflation (and other factors intended to promote efficiency).

The OEB is an independent and impartial public agency. We make decisions that serve the public interest. Our goal is to promote a financially viable and efficient energy sector that provides you with reliable energy services at a reasonable cost.

BE INFORMED AND HAVE YOUR SAY

You have the right to information regarding this application and to be involved in the process.

You can:

- review Veridian's application on the OEB's website now.
- sign up to observe the proceeding by receiving OEB documents related to the hearing.
- file a letter with your comments, which will be considered during the hearing.
- become an active participant (called an intervenor). Apply by December 10, 2013 or the hearing will go ahead without you and you will not receive any further notice of the proceeding.
- at the end of the process, review the OEB's decision and its reasons on our website.

LEARN MORE

These proposed charges relate to Veridian's distribution services. They make up part of the Delivery line -- one of the five line items on your bill. Our file number for this case is EB-2013-0174. To learn more about this hearing, find instructions on how to file letters or become an intervenor, or to access any document related to this case please select the appropriate application from the list at the OEB website: www.ontarioenergyboard.ca/notice. You can also phone our Consumer Relations Centre at 1-877-632-2727 with any questions.

ORAL VS. WRITTEN HEARINGS

There are two types of OEB hearings - oral and written. Veridian has applied for a written hearing. The OEB is considering this request. If you think an oral hearing is needed, you can write to the OEB to explain why.

PRIVACY

If you write a letter of comment or sign up to observe the hearing, your name and the content of your letter or the documents you file with the OEB will be put on the public record and the OEB website. However, your personal telephone number, home address and email address will be removed. If you are a business, all your information will remain public. If you apply to become an intervenor, all information will be public.

This rate hearing will be held under section 78 of the Ontario Energy Board Act, 1998, S.O. 1998 c.15 (Schedule B).

Muskoka Pride holds vigil to support and remember transgendered victims —

Transgender Remembrance Day with the help of Muskoka Pride.

"I feel like it's close to my heart, and it's also something that is becoming a little more accessible for people in general," said LePage. "It's something that's out there, and ready to be seen and dealt with."

International Transgender Remembrance Day has been marked since 1999 and began in the United States as a memorial to Rita Hester, a young transgender who was killed in Allston, Massachusetts. Now the day is recognized in several countries worldwide.

According to Transgender Europe's Trans Murder Monitoring project, 236 transgendered people were reported murdered last year around the world, considered to be due to their transgender status. However, they estimate the actual number to be much larger.

LePage said he hopes exposure, with events like this one, will help make change.

"People aren't necessarily against it (transgender); they don't know," he said. "They don't know until they see it, until they hear about it, until they have a chance to meet somebody. Which is one of the reasons I've been as out as I have been."

LePage grew up in Gravenhurst and transitioned a few years ago.

He said he knows other transgendered people who moved into larger cities like Toronto, but he stayed, and that has caused its own challenges.

"Everyone knows me, it's been good and it's been bad," he said. "It becomes difficult to leave behind, but also I haven't experienced a lot of the negativity that other people have."

But he has faced some prejudice.

"I have experienced some comments, but not outright violence," He said. "I'm pretty lucky in that sense."

Andrew Baker, secretary with Muskoka Pride, said events like this are important.

"It's about education and awareness. It's about outreach and it's about community building," he explained.

He said many people in smaller towns might not recognize transgender issues as something faced in their community.

"A lot of people, when they think of things like Trans Day of Remembrance, they are impacted by it," he said. "But they don't do anything about it because they don't think it's in their community."

And he said the event does more than remember those lost.

"Holding an event in somewhere like Gravenhurst says ... there are trans people in the community who need your support," he explained. "I think that carries value, in terms of raising awareness about local community, but also impacting change."

He said events like this have shaped public policy and changes in legislation. Last year Ontario included gender identity in the Human Rights Code.

"But that was a long journey of activism and awareness events such as today," said Baker.

He also said events like this can have negative repercussions.

"The other thing that events like this do as well, too, sadly within some communities that are really experiencing transphobia, is increase transphobia," he explained and said it is because publicity of these events can spark anger. "I think regardless of the response there is a positive, in a sense that it's raising awareness and it's impacting change."

Both Baker and LePage said they think transgender violence comes from a lack of understanding and fear.

"I think for a lot of people, when they first encounter a transgender person, or they have that interaction, they have predisposed thoughts in their head," Baker said and added those thoughts may be historic, religious or because they do not know or they think it's wrong. "It becomes a place of judgment. Often times our first response is fight or flight."

But, according to Baker, current gender ideas are fairly new.

"When you are talking about gender, the binary, as you call male and female, is not very old, and it's very colonizational."

■ OPINION

Fight speeding tickets

Last week we talked to self-professed “toughest enforcer” police officer in Ontario about how to best avoid a speeding ticket.

Sometimes bad luck happens though, and this week we speak with Jason Baxter, co-owner of X-Copper, a law firm owned and operated solely by former police officers.

They defend traffic tickets on your behalf, and claim a 99% success rate at getting tickets reduced.

What is Mr. Baxter’s single biggest piece of advice? Fight every ticket.

Upon receiving a speeding fine, you have three options on how to proceed, and all three are listed on the back of the ticket.

Option #1 is to plead guilty, to which Mr. Baxter says “don’t”

Option #2 is to request a meeting with the prosecutor in the hopes they will make positive recommendations to the Justice of the Peace. Choosing option #2 is pointless though, because the officer is not required to attend the hearing, eliminating the chance to win on a technicality.

That’s why you choose option #3, “not guilty.” By checking this box, a trial is requested, which requires the officer to attend.

It also creates the opportunity to speak with the prosecutor, and perhaps have the charge reduced to a lesser penalty (be it less points or a reduced fine), or even have it completely withdrawn.

Mr. Baxter notes that just because you requested a trial doesn’t mean it will happen, especially in a high-volume court; they just don’t have the time to process everything that comes through.

Choose option #3, even if you don’t think the speeding ticket is very expensive. To many, this is a time-consuming process which requires time off work to go through an intimidating procedure. With no guarantee of a positive outcome, it may seem easier just to eat the price of the fine.

The reason you fight every ticket is because of your future insurance rates.

It may be worth considering X-Copper’s $250 minimum fee, because that $60 today turns into thousands of dollars in higher insurance costs down the road, then add in taking a day off work, plus a negative mark on your driving record.

Regardless if you choose to hire help or not, always fight a speeding ticket because the insurance company can use that one ticket to raise your rates for three years.
