To who ever has the power to say no to this,

I would like it noted that here is one natural gas consumer who is totally opposed to any increases to the price of natural gas.

It is my understanding that there is, and will be for the foreseeable future, a glut of natural gas. My understanding is that there is so much natural gas being brought out of the ground in North America that they don't know where to put it all, and as such, the price should be going down, not up.

Thanks
