I'm a 76 year old retired male thats worked from 15 years of age to 60, never been out of a job and paid taxes this whole time. I've led a very varied life from construction, machine shop, industry, taught electricity for a bit and farmed, now I'm into restoring old vehicles. A few people have expressed envy of my broad knowledge of many different professions so when we broach the subject of electricity I feel quite confident to know what I'm talking about then when it comes to industrial wind turbines well it's wrong wrong wrong. If the MOE were concerned with green energy I feel they should be more interested in finding a solution towards a cheap sustainable source of power like water power for mankind rather than subsidized by tax payers industry to produce electricity who's bottom line is profit. If these industries desire to build the turbines it should be with their own money on land approved by small communities or in industrial parks where the electricity is most needed. In my case the way the system is set up, it hits me hard because my home is electricly heated so then it costs more to heat then it costs more to deliver, more for regulatory charges, more for debt retirement charge plus more for Hst which to me is totally unfair and I see my future of what is left of sending me into poverty. My home is not designed for other means to heat other than, ground source which is so expensive that realisticly at my age, doesn't make any sense. Now to make matters worse I see where you are allowing the turbines to be built in places where it will cause economical damage to other interests in regards to tourism and airport expansion which I see by expansion could be the remaking of the city of Peterborough in fact I've even written a letter to our local MP with a suggestion to get in contact with Porter Airlines and explaining that Peterborough does have the possibility of getting a rail service back into the city. Thanks for your time. Gerry Lukow
