Mr. Rosenkranz is an energy consultant with experience in natural gas supply planning, pipeline and storage development, and utility regulation. Clients include developers and operators of electric generation facilities, energy regulators and other public agencies, and natural gas consumers.

Mr. Rosenkranz began his career as a market analyst and supply planning consultant to natural gas pipeline and distribution companies. As a project manager with J. Makowski Company, Mr. Rosenkranz directed gas market studies and participated in the development, marketing, and financing of gas pipeline and storage projects. He has submitted testimony at the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, and appeared as an expert witness before the Ontario Energy Board and state utility commissions. Mr. Rosenkranz received a BA in economics at George Washington University and completed all course and examination requirements for a doctorate in economics at Northwestern University.
