

Good Brothers close barge again

Music on the Barge at Gull Lake Rotary Park in Gravenhurst once again presents the multi-award winning country music group The Good Brothers on Sunday, Aug. 16 beginning at 7:30 p.m.

"The annual visit of the Good Brothers has become a summer highlight of the concert series," said Fred Schulz, co-ordinator of the music series. "This year will mark the 24th performance at Music on the Barge and we hope many of their fans will once again come out to this great final concert of our 2015 season."

The Good Brothers are eight-time Juno Award winners. As a Canadian Country Group of the Year, they have recorded album sales of more than 265,000 in Canada alone and throughout the course of a stellar 30-year career, have managed to stay at the forefront of the Canadian country music scene.

Songs such as Fox on the Run, Alberta Bound, The Rabbit and more recently, She Told Me So, and I'll Be Seeing You Around are Canadian classics that have brought the Good Brothers international attention. Their charismatic live shows have earned them a reputation as great entertainers.

Brian, Bruce and Larry Good were born into a musical family and raised in Richmond Hill, where they launched their career singing folk songs as the Kinfolk. Through the '70s and '80s, the Good Brothers built a reputation for having one of the most entertaining shows in Canadian country

Town seems genuinely concerned —

Those on the prescribed list have 90 days from the time they were notified of the board's intent to sell to indicate interest. If none step forward, the land and building would then be offered for sale to the public.

However, due to conflicts with the town council's meeting schedule, there have been changes to the process. Council was to meet next Tuesday, days after the Aug. 15 deadline and some members will be away for that particular meeting, so the school board has agreed to an extension for the town, according to interim chief administrative officer Scott Lucas.

"(The school board) said that if we were comfortable enough that we were going ahead with submitting a bid, some number, whatever it is, that if we sent them a letter with an expression of interest in the property, not a formal offer, that it would hold the place for us until we have our next meeting."

Lucas said the council would discuss an offer for the property at its next planning meeting instead, slated for Aug. 25, exactly 10 days after the previous deadline.

The town has received an independent appraisal of the building, but the municipality will not reveal the figure contained in the report.

Lucas said if the town were to submit a formal bid at its Aug. 25 planning meeting, the two sides would then have 30 days to negotiate a price for the property.

"That is where we would eventually come to a number; hopefully, something that we are both comfortable with," he said.

The co-operative is hosting its heritage days on Aug. 15.

The group will host an all-day pancake breakfast, musical entertainment, vendors and displays.

Nice said she believes the mood will be festive at the celebration, given the news the negotiations to buy the property are at hand.

"I think we will be pretty happy because I do believe the town is very committed in making this purchase if they can, and they seem agreeable of our offer. I must say that our dealings with the town have been very positive ... they do seem to have genuine concern that we are able to get that building permanently."
