Thinking of hosting a grad party?

OPP has warning and some tips

Postmedia Network

With summer just around the corner, along with the traditional season of high school prom parties, the Ontario Provincial Police is asking that caution be taken, and has also issued some basic information along with some tips.

If alcohol and/or drugs are involved it's possible the party may get out of control, leading to situations where teens and young adults are exposed to unnecessary risks, both legal and health-related, says the OPP.

Youth who drink alcohol are at a higher risk of harm compared to adults due to their inexperience and lower tolerance. Quite often decisions made under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs lead to dangerous situations that can cause serious injury and death, says the police force.

The OPP is warning all parents and caregivers of the inherent dangers of attending and/or hosting after-prom parties. Property owners can, and have been held civilly responsible for injuries sustained to persons on their property. The OPP wants to make it very clear that unsupervised after-prom parties and/or "field parties" are unsafe environments for anyone. Police are often called to investigate criminal reports of assault, drug and alcohol offences, sexual assaults, thefts, mischief and other related crimes stemming from these types of parties.

Police are encouraging parents and caregivers to speak with young people about the associated dangers of attending such events and find alternative activities for them to partake in.

And for those who choose to attend or host one of these parties to be prepared for an increase in police presence as at this time of year our members are out aggressively enforcing the law to ensure our children enjoy these gatherings in a safe and responsible manner.

Everyone has a part to play in community safety and it is our hope that anyone with information on suspected field parties or unsupervised after-prom parties will contact Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477 (TIPS).
