I had been under the impression that the amalgamation was not to result in increased costs to customers. I understand costs increase over time, but with a rate increase being proposed only months after the amalgamation I question that we aren't paying for part of this merger. If this rate increase is a result of this merger than the merger should never have been approved in the first place being it results in a negative impact to the customer base. I'm not supportive of a rate increase at this time as the merger should have found efficiencies to maintain the existing rate structure.
