While I can understand that Hydro One needs to remain fiscally responsible as an organization, moving forward with this proposal during a pandemic is socially irresponsible. Many seasonal property owners are struggling to keep properties that have been in their families for decades - they are not high income earners and many have suffered numerous hardships over the past year through deaths, loss of health, and loss of employment.

While many corporations are working hard to give their customers a break during these trying times, Hydro One is seeking to cause additional hardship. It will be a grave shame if the OEB does not view this change as inappropriate at this point when this is already so much suffering in these unprecedented times.
