I am one of the more than 50% who will see their hydro rates jump by over 100% should this new pricing system take effect.

The argument of the costs being spread out with higher density holds true but since I along with many others use zero hydro for significant times of the year I would think the infrastructure would last longer as well. The rates we pay when the hydro usage is zero for significant times of the year make the increases seem even harder to swallow. Our seasonal place and our permanent residence pay the same rate for the electricity itself so will this exorbitant increase show up in delivery?
