I am very saddened and frustrated to learn of additional costs that will be borne by the customer when your senior administrators are pocketing millions of dollars in wages, income and benefits: not only at Hydro One itself but also at the level of the Ontario Energy Board.

Having a small cottage where it costs a hundreds of dollars a for "delivery charges and administration" during months when there is no electricity being delivered is ludicrous. I don't understand the premise of charges for distribution when it isn't happening? Now to advise us that the cost will increase is again ludicrous.
