I own a property on an island. It is therefore seasonal. For 6 months of the year it is inaccessible and strictly does not need any hydro. I still pay a delivery charge. I feel highly discriminated against.

1. My hydro consumption is governed by its limited use.

2. Being ecofriendly, I have endeavored to use as little hydro as possible..

No electric heating, no A/C, as little light as possible etc etc.

3. Your chart indicates my efforts benefit me little.

My hydro bill will more than double. Heavy users will see maybe a 28% increase. You quote mitigation measures but that does nothing in the long run.

We are being squeezed in all directions but we read utility companies are not hurting too much. Soon cottage country will comprise of millionaires with enormous homes where only CEO's can visit. Muskoka and other country areas will not be accessible to people like us. Shame on you.
