We have historically had power outages at the slightest wind and/or storm.

Although this has improved in recent years, we still notice our power out for extended periods of time in relation to the mainland across the lake. This is very frustrating, and as a rural property, more inconvenient than our mainland neighbours.

I don't have an issue with the rates increasing, as long as our service increases as well. How is this going to happen?

Thank you for your time,
Jane Macpherson
