Hello,

I have submitted a letter regarding this notice and wish to add an additional point of consideration to the decision making board. It is my understanding that since my cottage is on an island and I have at least two months in the fall and two months in the spring where the ice is either too thin to safely traverse to too thick to achieve boat access that my island cottage cannot be considered a "residence" by typical definitions. Does this definition not apply to the hydro one "residential" classifications?

Thank you,

Lee Quenneville
