Please consider the denial of this increase for residential users. In the present economic status this increase will add increased financial difficulty. I am speaking especially on behalf of us seniors that do not have more earning power, as well as low income workers. The current inflation of prices are a real strain. The big companies are always posting their large profits as well as lists that show the high wages earned by CEO's and administrators. The increases are not a hardship on them and do not understand the hardship that the normal or less fortunate people face each day. Huge profits and large wages posted by these companies does not make it favourable at this time to have increases that cause stress and angst to the normal Canadian. Where does a senior get more money to even stay warm in their home?
