In an Enbridge media release of 4 November, 2022, Al Monaco, President and CEO commented "While global economies and energy markets are experiencing significant volatility, Enbridge's premium North America franchises, resilient commercial underpinnings, and our increasing inventory of organic opportunities put us in a great position to continue to grow into the future.... Looking forward, our low-risk business model provides us with excellent visibility to growing cash flows and our assets are underpinned by long-term contracts or cost-of-service frameworks that provide built-in inflation protections."

(see <https://www.enbridge.com/media-center/news/details?id=123742&lang=en>)

This company, which continues to earn profit and enjoy "built-in inflation protections " even while its customers are suffering a recession and feeling current inflation conditions at their own dwindling bank balances, should not be awarded a rate increase. Indeed this would contribute directly to the economic strains that we consumers are experiencing daily.
