I think this is absolutely ridiculous. It's bad enough that literally EVERYTHING costs more, but companies that make millions, if not billions, of dollars are raising prices. You cannot tell me that costs have gone up significantly for the company, and even if they have, I highly doubt it will have such a huge impact on Entegrus that they need to pass it along to their customers. I am so sick and tired of corporate greed and it's getting disgusting. At this point, I would rather live by candlelight like they used to BEFORE someone decided to take it all and charge people to use it. It should be free or subsidized by the government. This isn't someone's invention, this is a natural discovery and should not be used to make a profit.
