In the past couple of years hydro costs have been very high in the London area. Even CBC has reported on this. It appears that as there have been no significant changes in weather and fewer people are working from home (for example) that London Hydro seems to have a mismanagement issue.

In my opinion if this latest substantial increase is required to rectify London Hydro's management issues then I will support it. However, there should be a proviso that no further increases be allowed for a minimum of 2 years. The public should not have to support a business' failure to run efficiently. As the city is the sole owner and does not respond to inquiries on the subject it raises the question "What are they hiding?". If it is within your mandate perhaps an audit is indicated before any rate increases are approved.
