While I understand the need for a company to be able to raise rates to keep up with inflation, this increase is yet another hit to many poverty stricken families in London, including my own. Trying to budget for the month with increases to home bills like hydro is a constantly losing battle where we have to sacrifice expenditures for other needs, like groceries.

I can't imagine my letter of comment will bring much change to this decision, but I urge London Hydro to think about their customers who aren't in a position to be able to afford this increase. The increase may be small, but with wallets already bursting at the seams, it doesn't take much for it to burst.
